The Ottawa Senators were anything but sad to take to the ice Sunday without Dany Heatley, the best goal-scorer in their histo-

It was nothing personal against the disgruntled leftwinger, who had his trade request finally granted after a deal was struck Saturday with the San Jose Sharks.

But the end of the summer-long saga came much to the relief of his former teammates and makes the team better, at least in the estimation of captain Daniel Alfredsson.

'I still think we could have worked it out and we would have been OK, but this is obviously something that would have happened eventually, and getting it done earlier is a big plus," Alfredsson said following the team's first on-ice session of training camp

Even longtime linemate Jason Spezza, Heatley's closest friend on the team, admitted the deal that brings right-winger Ionathan Cheechoo, once a 56-goal

'It was a tough situation for both of us," Spezza said. "He wanted out and I wanted what's best for our club." The teams also swapped 2010 draft picks, with the Senators giving up a fifthround selection for San Jose's second-round choice.

Earlier this summer, Heatley claimed he wanted out because of his unhappiness with his diminished role, particularly under coach Cory Clouston. Later, he hinted at personal reasons as the cause. In the end, he never did reveal why he sought a move.

There are 380,000 sports volunteers in Ontario, putting in 167 million hours of volunteer time a year, Watson said.

Israel, U.S. hoping for middle ground

MIDDLE EAST Israeli Prime Minister Beniamin tanyahu, speaking on the eve of a key meeting with the White House Mideast envoy, said yesterday that differences remain with the U.S. over resuming peacemaking with the Palestinians. Netanyahu delivered the assessment before flying to Cairo for talks with Egypt's president, a main mediator in efforts to restart peace talks. Today he is scheduled to meet George Mitchell, U.S. President Barack Obama's envoy. The Obama administration, with Mitchell as the point man, has been pressing Israel to declare a halt to construction in its West Bank settlements. Palestinians claim the West Bank as part of their future state.

Peace possibilities

• One possible scenario was published yesterday by the Israeli daily Haaretz. It quoted unnamed European diplomats as saving negotiations would concentrate on drawing a border between Israel and a Palestinian state.

tanyahu, whose Likud Party is ideologically committed to expanding settlements and holding on to the West Bank, has been bargaining for a compromise that would allow some building to continue.

Are you change-ready?

odav I find myself contemplating one of the great truths of existence. The only real constant in life is this: everything changes.

mid-September, change is everywhere. Leaves turn colour, kids are back at school, life returns to normal. This week I head back to college, completing my training to become a United Church minister. Returning to school in my forties was a huge life change. I knew there would be people in my class who were younger than me. I didn't realize they would be the teachers.

What's really got me thinking about change is that, recently, I swapped simple, straightforward, I-love-you-and-justwant-to-make-your-world-ahappier-place word processing program for one that's complex, confusing and appears designed to ensure that whatever I do is accomplished with the greatest possible effort...and cursing.

In computer terms this is sort of change is called " an upgrade."

Experts tell us we should, "Approach change in a calm, rational manner, anticipating advantage and welcoming new challenge." They should add, "Also, you should learn to fly."

Greyhounds sits up and begs for lunch

Intercity public transportation is an essential service for many, but Greyhound Canada is threatening to cut it off for people who don't live in adequately profitable jurisdictions, unless taxpayers come up with a $15- to $20-million bailout.

Manitoba is to lose rural service in October, northwestern Ontario in December. Potentially next on for the chop: Alberta; British Columbia; Saskatchewan; and the Northwest and Yukon Territories.

Some have expressed scepticism about Grey-hound's financial straits, pointing to the company's snazzy new terminal at International Winnipeg Airport. In return for permission to operate a monopoly on profitable urban routes, provincial governments require Greyhound to serve money-losing rural routes. The former used to compensate for the latter, but now Greyhound complains their lunch is being eaten by discount airlines and the train. Translation: In places where people have a choice, they don't choose the bus, because the bus, frankly, sucks.

When I have a choice, I take the train. The bus is slower, cramped, not conspicuously cheaper, and customer service? Well, I to side with the doubters of Greyhound's tales of woe, partially because as a customer. I have been lied to by Greyhound. Usually, it happens on olidays, when there holidays, aren't enough buses to carry the passengers. Apparently, these seasonal spikes in demand come as a complete surprise to Greyhound. Every damned

One Christmas in Toronto, as we lined up in a deep freeze for the bus, it was clear that not all the passengers were going to fit.

No problem. They assured us another bus was coming to take on the extra passengers. This was not, as it turned out, true, and we ended up spending the night in the crowded terminal.

The ticket agent had to be escorted out of the building by security. People were angry. They were stranded on Christmas, and they'd been lied to.
Last Thanksgiving, the same thing happened in Pembroke.

The bus for Ottawa, full, passed through. Don't worry, we were told: There's another bus coming in 15 minutes. As the passengers sat there for hours with their useless tickets, that estimate didn't change. Any time anyone asked, another bus was coming in fifteen minutes. Welcome to Godot Bus Lines. The bus is the only public transportation available in Pembroke. VIA service was cut in the 1980s. I prevailed on my parents for a ride back to Ottawa. One passenger started getting a group together to raise $200 for a taxi. Now whole regions of the country, already without a choice. may be left without a ride. Bad dog, Greyhound.

Going Green

Did you know?

Bottled water is a $100-billion indus-try annually, while tap water is more heavily regulated and is virtually free — up to 10,000 times cheaper, the Earth Policy Institute says. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Water, water everywhere — or is it?

t's 1 a.m. and I am awakened by the sound of a running toilet. Laying there listening to the water trickle endlessly, I remember that the baby's diapers need to go in for another wash cycle. Then I try to remember if I paid the unusually large water bill from filling the pool this summer. there's something else nagging at the back of my mind — oh, yeah, we're supposed to write about water conservation.

Canada is a fairly wet country. Lakes, reservoirs, and streams cover about seven per cent of our total land surface area. Most Canadians live near a body of water - in fact, most live near the shores of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River. Standing on the shore of Lake On-tario it is hard to imagine water as a finite resource. When we turn on the tap, water comes out. What's the problem?

At home, the greatest challenge is providing access to clean and safe drinking water. The needs of people for drinking water compete most strongly with the needs of agriculture for irrigation, and to a lesser extent, the needs of industry. In fact, around the world, 70 per cent of water extracted for all uses goes to agriculture. When the water is returned through drainage to streams or seepage to aquifers, it is often polluted. The pool of freshwater that can safely be consumed is shrinking while the population's need for water is growing.

So, what do we do? In wealthy countries, we have two options: Treat water, removing these pollutants, or abandon our polluted freshwater sources and turn to the sea. Water treatment is an energy-intensive enter-prise, desalination even more so. So, treating and conserving our freshwater it is. Energy conservation has reached our collective consciousness, but we fail to make the connection between water conservation and energy conservation. We will only appreciate the importance of conserving water when we understand where our water comes from and what the economic and environmental costs are.

Beyond our borders, access to safe drinking water cannot be taken for granted. Lack of infrastructure and high energy costs may discourage the treatment of drinking water. The most recent United Nations World Water Report finds that "physical and economic water scarcity and limited or reduced access to water are major challenges facing society and are key factors limiting economic development in many countries." The report also finds that we are not on track to meet the U.N.'s goal of improved sanitation for most of the world's population. These two factors set the stage for a global water crisis.

Economic development and epidemic prevention in the world's poorest countries, then, requires improved sanitation coupled with conservation practices. Where do we fit in? Obviously, we can provide aid such as capital for infrastructure projects. We can also play a role as consumers. We need to educate ourselves and avoid imported food products that are water resource intensive — that includes bottled water. And I need to fix my toilet.

ways to save water

There are a variety of reasons why a family would want to reduce their water consumption — save mon-ey, avoid taxes, lower energy use, minimize the carbon footprint — but sometimes it's hard to break old habits.

Here are a few helpful suggestions from Canadian government agencies and from bathroom and kitchen manufacturer American Standard.

Half of domestic water consumption takes place in the bathroom.

If a tap leaks, fix it. Just If a tap leaks, i.e. a small drip can waste seven buckets of water a

A low-flow shower head reduces consumption by 25 per cent or more without spoiling shower experience. your

The biggest single source of water use in the home is the toilet. Switching to a high efficiency model will cut the total flush by 40 or 50 per cent. Many municipalities will cover part of the cost.

Turn the tap off while you are cleaning your teeth or shaving. That's water running to waste. A quick burst to clean your brush or your razor is water well-used.

Most of the rest is used in the kitchen.

5 Again — turn the tap off when the water is running to waste. When hand-washing dishes use a partly filled sink. When washing fruits and vegetables use a sink or bowl. A spray attachment is an economical way of rinsing.

Save your dishwasher for full loads. The same applies to your clothes washer. You'll be saving energy as well as water.

Drinking lots of water is good for you. Letting the tap run until the water is cold is bad for everyone.

For drinking, keep a container of water cold in your fridge.

How green is your laundry?

After a long day at work, tossing your clothes straight into the dirty pile can be tempting. But are those clothes really dirty? Consider wearing the garments one more time before washing them. 9Front-loading high-effi-ciency washing machines use much less energy and water than conventional top-loading machines. The money you save from using less energy can offset the higher pricetag of the machine. You can save up to 50 per cent of energy in every load just by switching to

If you have a garden

During warm weath-er, lawns and gardens need the equivalent of 5 mm of rainfall — no more. Much less is required when it's cool.

Over-watering in anticipation of a shortage is a waste. The soil won't retain the extra moisture.

12Brooms sweep driveways better than hoses — it prevents soil, grit and debris that has accumulated and that often contains contaminants from entering our water system and drinking water supply. NEWS CANADA

Move raises questions for men's national team

riday marked a special day for Canadian fans of the beautiful game.

Our country's best player arguably the most talented in North America at present — decided to return home in the prime of his career to play club soccer.

In any other country, such a move would have been heralded as a resounding success. So, why has there been so much grumbling about Toronto FC's signing of defensive-midfielder Julian de Guzman?

The consensus among those who don't wear the TFC strip religiously is that the quality of the Canadian national team will diminish if our top-flight players begin to regularly seek out MLS with its larger pay-cheques and lower level of Top-level talent needs to play top-level competition to maintain its edge and, in the absence of it, quality players will rest on their laurels, content to ride out their careers and collect their dollars.

It's an argument without much cause. American fans made a similar case in the late 1990's as MLS came on the scene. If American players, the argument went, were given a domestic option, they would never strive for more and the quality of play would drop off. Ultimately MLS has had the opposite effect. American players still seek to play overseas, but those who play domestically make up a third of the U.S. national squad. The U.S. hasn't missed a World Cup since

There is another issue that has some concerned: The belief that TFC doesn't have the best interests of Canadian soccer at heart. At this year's Gold Cup, Canadian players Dwayne DeRosario, Adrian Serioux and Jim Brennan all opted to stay home with the club.

In a year in which the Gold Cup didn't really matter (qualification for the Confederations Cup was not at stake) it's certainly acceptable for players to make that choice.

But what are troubling are the suggestions, made to me by more than one agent, that two of those players received a bonus from TFC for having stayed with the team.

If true, it sets a dangerous precedent. With Vancouver joining MLS in 2011 and Montreal likely not far behind, the success of our national team will be linked more than ever to domestic clubs. If teams put their own petty interests ahead of the national game, it will undermine all that is being done to grow soccer here and that includes bringing players like Julian de Guzman home.

Getting moms back to work

JON TATTRIE

As spouses lose jobs and the pressure mounts to bring in money, the recession is forcing some stayathome parents back into the workforce sooner than expected.

"They're dealing with the fact that their education is now old, their skill set is often not up to par, particularly as to do with computers," says Anne Brunelle, an employment counsellor at Times Change Women's Employment Service, a not-forprofit organization based in Toronto. "It's a matter of figuring out what skill set they have been working on as stay-at-home moms that they can transfer into the workforce."

Jumping back into work after a decade or more can be scary. "They (may have been) expecting eventually to go back, but they thought they could take a bit of time. Then their spouse loses a well-paying job and they both end up looking for survival jobs so they can keep the house and keep the kids fed," Brunelle says.

Many stay-at-home parents have been involved in volunteer work through sports their kids are involved in, or may have written newsletters for the school or helped with fundraising. These are "transferable skills" that can spruce up a dusty resumé.

"We have a career-planning workshop ... where women tell the stories of tasks they've done and then the rest of the group tells them what they saw as skills and accomplishments," she says.

"For women who are desperate in the short term, we figure out what they can do that is not so skilled. How can they sell themselves as someone who works at a grocery store, even though that wasn't what they had done before and they may be well overeducated for it?" she says. "It can very difficult to say, 'I've was a librarian and have my master in library sciences, but they no longer recognize what I've got. I have to do something; do I end up working in a book store where I used to run a library?

Once the basic fiscal emergency has passed, parents can use courses at colleges or public libraries to update their computer skills. Many clients Brunelle sees don't have email accounts: Get one, or you'll look outdated.

"The Facebook account you share with the kids isn't enough," she says. Then, look at furthering education. "While employers may not recognize a 15-or 20-year-old education, education institutes sometimes will."

That can slingshot you back into a career path that is satisfying — and pays the bills.

STORMY DAYS AHEAD STILL FOR ONTARIO LABOUR

Although the forecast for national hiring climate is looking bright for fall, Ontario's hard-hit labour market still looks stormy, according to the latest study by Manpower Canada. The survey says that employers are cautiously optimistic about hiring prospects for the fourth quarter of 2009, from October to December. The sectors in Ontario with the best hiring intentions include wholesale and retail, finance, insurance, real estate and education, while the sectors predicting job cuts include public administration, manufacturing of durable goods, construction and public utilities. Manpower says the best places to find employment in Ontario this fall are in Cornwall, Barrie, Kingston, Thunder Bay and Kitchener/Cambridge.

Green Garage founder can make your roof a living plant oasis

Viebrock's olin garage is verv cool. It's custom made with stylish wooden slats on its exterior walls and a workshop inside. Plus it has a garden on the roof.

The pretty mixture of sedum, lavender, chives and other low plants lowers the surrounding air temperature - very cool - in summer, and helps insulate the garage in winter.

Viebrock, 38, had no intention of being on the cutting edge of green innova-tion when he sold his share of a downtown Toronto Internet company back in 2005. "I decided I wanted to build something real as opposed to things that weren't really real."

He didn't know what that was, but he'd always loved architecture and design and knew the design program AutoCAD. His garage was about to fall down and he called around trying to find someone to help him put a green roof on it. No one would work in such a small space.

So he spent the summer of 2006 rebuilding the garage and equipping it with a roof garden — the roof tilts slightly so he can

The blog he wrote about the project garnered interest. So that winter he took some home renovation courses at nearby George Brown College and then launched Green Garage and began installing green roofs on everything from sheds to houses.

For existing buildings, Viebrock starts by having an engineer assess the structure to see if it can withstand a minimum of three inches of soil. (When Viebrock designs the building, he makes it tough enough to take six inches.)

Viebrock then builds up the garden in layers, in-cluding a waterproof membrane, small rocks or gravel (for drainage) and an irrigation drip line.

Back from the dead

Matt Damon is alive, well and promoting new movie

PHIL BROWN for Metro Canada

Contrary to news circulating on the internet, Matt Damon is not dead. He's very much alive and was laughing about the ridiculous rumour at a TIFF press conference.

'I don't know why that happens. That's a really reckless thing to do. I had to call my parents and everything," said the actor, "I got forwarded the story and when you read it, it just gets sillier and sillier.

"By the end the guy who is supposed to be my agent is quoting the lyrics from the Fresh Prince Of Bel-Air. And yet my publicist got all these phone calls from very reputable sources. CNN called, the Boston Globe called. It was crazy.'

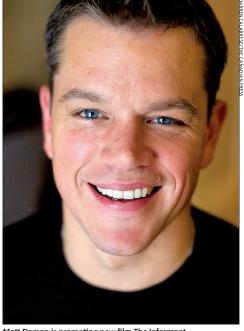

Fortunately the living Damon was able to visit Toronto to promote The Informant, a new collaboration with director Steven Soderbergh in which the actor plays a bi-polar execuwhistle-blower who awkwardly goes undercover for the FBI.

It's one of the actor's finest performances and one that he gained 30 pounds for, a la Robert DeNiro in Raging Bull.

"I sent (Steven Soderbergh) an email about two months before we were going to make it asking, 'What do you want this guy to look like physically?' He just wrote back 'doughy," revealed Damon. "The rational was that Steven didn't want any hard edges on the character. He wanted him undefined as metaphor for his personality. Of course, I only found out when I got there. I didn't question it. I just started eating," joked the actor.

Matt Damon relished his physical change for the film, "It felt fantastic. I just ate whatever I wanted and thought about nothing but the screenplay and the other actors," said Damon, "It was really nice to not think about anything else, compared to a Jason Bourne movie where I come home from work and have to go straight to the gym. It takes too much time away from my family. I just prefer to

The physical change pays off dividends in an almost chameleon-like performance from Damon. The actor's strong work is the centerpiece of a movie that Damon revealed he and Soderbergh had been toying with for years. "Scott Burns wrote it seven years ago and we've been sitting on it. We would refer back to it once or twice a year and we'd examined it enough to know that all the answers we needed were in the actual text when we started shooting. It was almost like doing a

Audiences shouldn't be daunted by new raw movie, Winfrey says

Oprah Winfrey says audiences shouldn't be daunted by the dark subject matter of her latest film project.

Winfrey is the executive producer of Precious: Based on the Novel Push by Sapphire, which is screening at the Toronto International Film Festival.

It's about an obese Harlem teen who is the victim of repeated sexual abuse.

"It is so raw that it will suck the air out of the Winfrey told a packed news conference yesterday.

Canadian Howie Mandel almost said "no deal" to the now hugely successful game show he hosts, and audiences have his wife to thank for changing his mind

"I actually said no to that show," Mandel, the host of Deal Or No Deal said before the 2009 Canada's Walk of Fame ceremony in Toronto Saturday.

"My wife, another bright comedian - Canadian, she's not a comedian told me to do it and that's why I did it. I listened. She 'Take the deal,' and it's the best advice I ever got.

Mandel was among an eclectic cast of eight group and individual inductees this year to Canada's Walk of Fame. Actress Kim Cattrall, Musicians and Tom Rodeo Cochrane, author Robert Munsch, Dsquared2 identical-twin fashion designers Dean and Dan Caten, athlete Chantal Petitclerc and the late actor Raymond Burr from TV's Perry Mason were all honoured with stars.

Also receiving her award more than a decade late - was Canadian icon Anne Canada's Walk of Fame inductee Kim Cattrall unveils her star in Toronto Saturday.

Murray, who said she couldn't pass up an opportunity to host the event.

"I sort of felt obligated because they awarded me this in 1998 and I didn't show up to pick it up," Murray said. "It's been 11 years, so I kind of owed them.'

Mandel speculated that Canada "reproduces" not produces — funny people because of the climate. He's found there are more laughs in colder rooms.

"If I had my druthers I never would have left (Canada)," he said. "Any time they invite me back,

I'm back. But this is the ultimate invitation.'

Cattrall, best known for the Sex and the City TV show and movie, said she was deeply honoured to be inducted to Canada's Walk of Fame this year.

"More than any other award I think it's been a little daunting because Canada is so dear to me," the Little River, B.C., native said.

Munsch, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the only inductee this year born outside Canada, but when he moved here with his wife it was a children's librarian in Guelph, Ont., who encouraged him to publish his stories and Munsch eventually got his Canadian citizenship.

"I don't think I would have told stories at all if I had stayed in the U.S.,' Munsch said.

As the only non-artist on the bill Saturday, Chantal Petitclerc said she felt a bit like the odd one out.

"When you're an athlete you're used to being in a stadium and racing on a track and then sweating," said the decorated athlete with 21 Paralympic medals — 14 of them gold — to her name. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Settler's Cookbook

Author: Yasmin Alibhai-Brown Publisher: Protobello Books Price: $29.95 (Hardcover)

In Yasmin Alibhai-Brown's succulent new memoir, the multicultural commentator traces her heritage in terms of travel and the tongue. Her 19th century ancestors left India for East Africa to pursue work, then were forced from Uganda as part of an Asian purge in 1972 and finally settled in the U.K. Their historically transitioning sense home is expressed through cultural variations on food Alibhai-Brown has experienced, acting as equal parts family biography and cookbook. From hot mango marmalade to Iena's Shepherd's Pie, Alibhai-Brown brings readers on a palatable journey through the past. BRIAN COULTON/ FOR METRO CANADA

Halibut with Egg Sauce

Metro Recipe of the Day

INGREDIENTS:

- 4 fresh or frozen and thawed halibut steaks, 1 in. (2.5 cm) thick 1 tbsp (15 ml) butter or margarine, melted 1 tbsp (15 ml) lemon juice 1/2 tsp (2 ml) garlic powder
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) salt 1/8 tsp (0.5 ml) black pepper

Egg sauce (see below) METHOD:

1. Preheat broiler. Rinse fish and pat dry. In small bowl, combine butter. lemon juice, garlic powder, salt, and pepper. 2. Arrange fish on lightly greased rack of broiler pan. Brush fish with half of butter mixture. Broil 5 inches from heat for 5 minutes. Using wide spatula, carefully turn fish over. Brush with remaining butter mixture. Broil 5 to 7 minutes more or until fish flakes when tested with fork. Serve with Egg Sauce.

EGG SAUCE:

In medium-size pot, whisk together 1/2 cup (125 ml) coffee cream, 2 tbsp (25 ml) all-purpose flour, 1/2 tsp (2 ml) dry mustard and 1/8 tsp (0.5 ml) each salt and black pepper. Whisk in 1/2 cup (125 ml) chicken broth. Cook over moderate heat, whisking constantly, 7 minutes or until mixture is thickened and bubbly. Stir in 2 chopped hardboiled eggs and 1 tbsp (15 ml) minced parsley; heat through.
